Diving for Pearls is the story of working class couple, Barbara and Den, and their heroic struggle for a meaningful life amidst the turmoil of change.

In love and facing the challenges and responsibilities of middle-age, they gamely confront pressing issues in their personal and working lives as the environment of their small coastal town transforms itself from an old industrial site of factories and warehouses to a brave new world of resorts and plush hotels.

Given the desperate nature of the characters' circumstances the play is often dramatic, involving and moving, but this is tempered by a wry, sometimes hilarious and very Australian sense of humour.

A brilliant improvised comedy about WA's Pinjarra Massacre. Created and performed by Nyoongar and Wadjella (whitefella) actors, Bindjareb Pinjarra demonstrates extraordinary risk taking through its fusion of history, outrageous comedy and physical theatre.

The catalyst for this theatrical history lesson is the mass killing of Nyoongar people at Pinjarra on 28 October 1834 - an event recorded as the Battle of Pinjarra but mourned by local Nyoongar as a massacre. These two perspectives are played out in front of a dramatic backdrop painted by Nyoongar artist Tjilyungoo (Lance Chadd).
